Complaint handling procedure

Our commitment to our clients

At Ninety One we aim to provide our clients with the highest levels of care and customer service. We value client relationships and whilst we try our very best to satisfy clients' requirements, inevitably some may have a complaint. In such circumstances, we encourage clients to address their complaints, queries or concerns to us. We prefer to receive complaints in writing, by email or by post, to ensure we receive correct details and our response is correctly directed.

Who should you contact if you want to make a complaint?

Complaints can be addressed to any of the offices listed in the 'Contact Us' section of our website, marked for the attention of the Compliance Officer. Alternatively, the addresses for each of our fund ranges are shown in the table overleaf. We encourage you to send any complaints to the relevant address for your particular fund holding. We have detailed the time-frames within which we will acknowledge your complaint and also the time-frames in which we will send our written response.

What if you are not satisfied with our response?

We will strive to resolve your complaint as quickly and amicably as possible. If however you are not satisfied with our response, then you may choose to escalate your complaint to the relevant third-party authority or ombudsman. Their details are provided in the final column in the tables on the following pages.
